Pecta-Cure Technical info

Pecta-Cure contains astringent substances, which make the intestinal wall contract and prevent dehydration.

Taking preventive measures before the diarrhoea occurs enables you to halve your dose of Pecta-Cure. It is not necessary to stop feeding with milk when Pecta-Cure is used; on the contrary, it is important that the calf still has nourishment supplied from the milk and that problems do not occur when the feeding with milk starts again.

When the calf continuously gets nourishment, weight loss as a result of the diarrhoea can be avoided.

Facts about Pectins

Diarrhoea remedies based on pectins are particularly appropriate to be used in a preventive way and especially when focusing on the death rate among calves where the main problem most often is diarrhoea, preventive efforts should already have begun at the expiry of the period of raw milk.

The ingredients of Pecta-Cure are leftovers, from various products containing pectin from the food industry, e.g. citrus and potatoes, which apply themselves as a film on the inside of the intestines. Thereby preventing bacteria from sticking, glucose to provide energy, different forms of salts to obtain the right amount of salt in the body, and different ethereal oils, which have a strong bactericidal effect.
